TRACY WALTON – CANCER & MASSAGE THERAPY - SAFE PRACTICE STEPS FOR MASSAGE THERAPISTS

Tracy Walton is the Dean of the Muscular Therapy Institute. Her concern is that the belief that massage might promote metastasis, has limited the ability of our profession to provide touch for people in cancer treatment, diagnosis, and survivorship or at end of life.

This rewarding work brings its challenges, as we navigate the complexities of cancer and cancer treatment. Tracy is a MT, researcher and teacher. She consults to hospitals and teaches “Caring for Clients with Cancer” for massage therapists nationally. She has worked in private practice, spa and hospital settings over 15 years of her practice. Tracy has worked with the Osher Institute at Harvard Medical School and the Beth Israel-Deaconess Medical Center, researching the roles of massage therapy for people with metastasis cancer. She is the 2003 AMTA teacher of the Year and loves integrating the heart, science and soul of bodywork.

Come and have fun with us by registering for Tracy Walton – Cancer & Massage Therapy - Safe Practice Steps for Massage Therapists workshop today!

Tracy Walton's workshop includes: workshop manual, resources, and completion certificate of 12 continuing education hours.

Specific materials needed – massage table, linens, lotion, paper & pen. Wear bathing suit or stretch pants/shorts. Recommended anatomy review in preparation for participation in this class.
